

Posts Tagged ‘ses petites mains’

Mains Event

Wednesday, June 18th, 2008

Fleet Week isn't until October, but I'm sure you can find some excuse to lay out the long green for the Lidia sailor pants by San Francisco clothing company Ses Petites Mains.

Based in Noe Valley, Ses Petites Mains was launched by designer Beth Miles, who clearly has an eye both for fine fabric and just-so details. Lines are simple and classic; buttons are heavy and lustrous; colors are muted enough that everything in the store seems to go together.

And oh, the fabrics. Running your hands over a rack of Ses Petites Mains selections may just send you into fabric ecstasy, so easily can you imagine the silky cottons and pliable linens caressing your skin. Too bad you'll have to settle for buying clothes for your daughter instead.

Ses Petites Mains clothing is available at many clothing boutiques in the Bay Area, including Fiddlesticks, Mabuhay, and Delilah Crown in San Francisco, or at online stores like Orange Button.

Tags: beth miles, children's clothing, clothes, ses petites mains

Posted in Preschool, San Francisco, School Age, Toddler | No Comments »

